Purpose

The code of conduct defines expected professional behavior and provides general principles for maintaining a respectful and responsible workplace.

Professional Behavior

Employees are expected to behave respectfully and professionally toward colleagues, customers, vendors, and business partners.

Confidentiality

Employees must protect confidential company and customer information and should access information only when required for their work.

Conflicts of Interest

Employees should disclose actual or potential conflicts of interest through the appropriate company process.

Gifts and Hospitality

Employees should follow company rules regarding gifts, hospitality, and interactions with customers or vendors. Items that could influence a business decision should not be accepted.

Harassment

Harassment, discrimination, bullying, and threatening behavior are not acceptable in the workplace.

Company Resources

Company systems, equipment, and information should be used responsibly and primarily for authorized business purposes.

Reporting Concerns

Employees who become aware of serious misconduct should use the appropriate reporting or escalation channel.

Compliance

Employees are expected to follow applicable laws, company policies, and professional standards relevant to their work.
