

Employee Expense Policy

TYPE: Policy

TITLE: Employee Expense Policy

DEPARTMENT: Finance

VERSION: 1.3

TAGS: expenses, expense claim, reimbursement, finance, receipts

STATUS: stable

CONTENT:

Purpose

This policy explains the general process for claiming reasonable expenses incurred for approved business activities.

Eligible Expenses

Reasonable expenses directly related to approved business activities may be reimbursed when they follow company limits and approval requirements.

Receipts

Employees should keep receipts, invoices, and other supporting documents for expense claims.

Approval

Expense claims require approval according to the applicable department approval process. Employees should not approve their own expenses when separation of duties is required.

Submission

Claims should be submitted through the approved expense system within the applicable submission period.

Business Meals

Business meals may be reimbursed when they are for a valid business purpose and comply with applicable limits. The business purpose should be recorded where required.

Personal Expenses

Personal shopping, personal subscriptions, fines, penalties, and expenses unrelated to approved business activity are not reimbursable.

Missing Receipts

When a receipt cannot be obtained, the employee should follow the company's documented exception process. Missing documentation may result in rejection of the claim.

Review

Finance may request additional information or return a claim for correction before reimbursement.